

MUSTLE, a book about triumph and defeat, tells a tale of the battle between the savvy streets versus the corporate 9-5 grind. It documents one man's mastery of both as he is fueled by a sheer will to succeed. This is the story of Logic, a man in his early 30s. His troublesome situation as a single father forces him to look for alternative methods to earn money for his household. Almost by accident, Logic stumbles upon a seemingly easy way to make money: selling sneakers and luxury brand shoes that he buys online and imports to the United States from China. Because the shoes are knock offs - fake replicas - he encounters robbery, run-ins with the law and eventually problems with one of the largest sports brands in the world when they threaten to sue him! Mustle depicts the ups and downs of the hustle. Providing you intricate, never before told, details of how Logic ran his empire in an underground economy including an account of the money he made and lost. This journey of achievement and tragedy gifts readers with life's most important lessons. Embedded in this street narrative are treasures of universal business lessons that Logic learned from his retail store on wheels as he sold thousands of shoes from the trunk of his car. Take a ride and learn how a man working full-time for an architectural firm by day also earned $50,000 on the streets selling sneakers part-time!
