Jay Smith > Conclusion In the West, Islam is a religion in search of an identity. Gone are the days when Islam could run slip-shod over cultures, dominating.

I believe the greatest motivation for young people to follow Islam is that they are seeking attention by being different rather than seeking for truth. Finding the inner Muslim prince -- In the third of his Ramadan articles, Eric Walberg looks at the increasing attraction to Islam on the part of Westerners. This chapter provides a history of Salafism in Britain, tracing its origins and development through a host of different groups. It explains why Salafism, on account.

I read it and I found that it is mainly discussing a concept called the "law of attraction", which states that like is attracted to like, and that whatever.

What can a young Muslim do when attracted to someone from the opposite sex whom they frequently meet at college or work, and they know. The flow of recruits, both fighters and families, leaving their homes in Europe to live under so-called Islamic State (IS) rule in Raqqa in Syria has.
